

Albrecht Fellowships for College Students

Fellowships to prepare undergraduates for careers in global business

Knowledge, skills, and connections. They are all key to having a successful career in global business and becoming a part of the corporate solutions to global challenges. At the World Trade Center Institute (WTCI), we help build the next generation of business leaders.

Current undergraduate and graduate students or recent college graduates are encouraged to apply. They tour global businesses and meet with executives from the Mid-Atlantic so they can get an inside look at how different organizations work and make the professional connections needed to stand out in the competitive job market. Participants are called Albrecht fellows, in honor of WTCI founder Dr. James Albrecht.

Program at a Glance

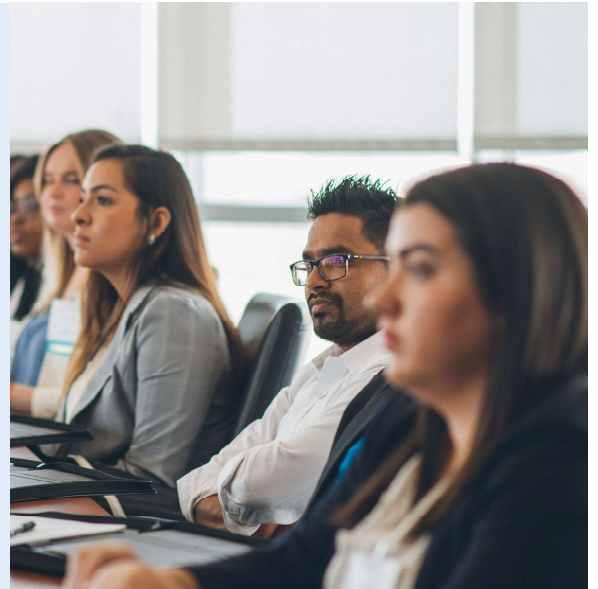

- 🕒 Learn about company business strategies and cultures.
- 🕒 Refine job application and interview skills
- 🕒 Hear first-hand stories of how people became business leaders
- 🕒 Build long-lasting working relationships with like-minded peers and mentors
- 🕒 Learn how to take advantage of LinkedIn, be a great leader, and communicate effectively

Albrecht Fellowships for College Students

Learn from the Pros

Sessions are led by business leaders and other WTCI network experts, all affiliated with Mid-Atlantic entities that work globally – such as Under Armour, Collins Aerospace, McCormick, Mindgrub, Dunlop Footware, Stanley Black & Decker, Jhpiego, and T. Rowe Price. This kind of real-world learning cannot happen in a classroom.

Top Reasons to Participate

For students

Learn about global business and leadership from well-established executives on their home turf and at WTCI events

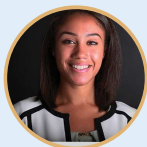

For educators

Get assistance in preparing your students for careers in global business

For business leaders

Help the Mid-Atlantic attract and retain top talent, including at your company, nonprofit, academic institution, or government agency

“Albrecht Fellowships offer so much intentionality related to making connections. There’s nowhere else you can go as a college student to get access to these business leaders.”

- Aeliana Lomax, Loyola University Maryland alumni and 2018 Albrecht Fellow

For more information about Albrecht Fellowships, contact
Manager of Fellowships Daniel Khoshkepazi at danielk@wtci.org

How to Apply

Approximately 30 fellows are selected each year. Applicants must demonstrate an aptitude for high-level leadership, a trajectory that shows achievement, strong communication and interpersonal skills, and the willingness to make a commitment of their personal time to participate in the program. The cost to be part of the program is $495.

Application form:
wtci.me/gps

